

An article on China Belt and Road Initiative was published in a national publication

August 5, 2019

One of Dentons HPRP's Partners, Fabian Pascoal, authored an opinion piece titled: "BUMN di Jalur Sutra" (State-Owned Enterprises on the Silk Road) exclusively for Investor Daily, a national leading publication. In the article he discusses the involvement of Indonesia's state-owned companies in the China Belt and Road initiative (BRI).

The article highlights that the Indonesian government's effort to accelerate national development requires massive funding and China's BRI initiative is a large potential source to fund national development. However, it's not without its dangers, especially with China's penchant to trap participating countries with debt. Indonesia's state-owned enterprises will be involved in BRI projects, but these enterprises must continue to improve their efficiency, capabilities, and partnership with municipality-owned enterprises in order to fully take advantage of the opportunities inherent in BRI. State-owned enterprises must ensure that Indonesia's participation in BRI benefits us as much as China.

The opinion piece was published on July 25, 2019 in the Investor Daily newspaper version as well as on its online news site, investor.id.
