An Indonesian leading national publication, Kompas, has published an opinion article by Andre Rahadian, Partner in Dentons HPRP, on the government of Indonesia's plan to formulate an "Omnibus Law".

The Omnibus Law is an important part of President Jokowi's second term administration's priority program, as it will be an umbrella law that replaces several laws at once relating to various cross-sectoral laws and regulations, and its establishment aims to overcome problems of overlapping regulations. However, is it easy to replace dozens of laws? What things must the government pay attention to, and what steps must be taken to launch this process? The article highlights the potential issues and how to anticipate the issues.

The opinion article was published on December 11, 2019 in the Kompas newspaper as well as on its online news site, Kompas.id.
