

US anti-dumping and anti-subsidy investigation on biodiesel originating from Indonesia

April 21, 2017

Indonesia is one of countries exporting to the US which is alleged to conduct unfair trade practices, which are condemned by international trade laws. In an Anti-Dumping investigation, the US claims that Indonesia has exported biodiesel at dumping prices, which is prohibited under the Anti Dumping Agreement. Moreover, the US is also conducting a countervailing measure investigation otherwise known as an anti-subsidy investigation and claims that the Indonesian government has provided subsidies in relation to biodiesel exports which have lead to injuries to the American domestic biodiesel industry. What is possible action for the investigation?

Partner in Dentons HPRP Andre Rahadian supported by associate lawyer Indria Prasastia have prepared a comprehensive article regarding the anti-dumping practice. Further, the article also highlights on the investigation of Anti-Dumping and Countervailing Measure, and the possible action for the investigation.

Full article is available here.

With its extensive experience in International Trade Dentons HPRP has been assisting corporations in the practices. Please contact partner listed under key contact for further details.

Your Key Contacts

Andre Rahadian

Partner, Jakarta

D +62 21 5701837

M +62 816 898654

andre.rahadian@dentons.com